

English at Work

What level of English do employers require for tasks at work?

All company sizes — All sectors — Showing Global

Writing emails and letters

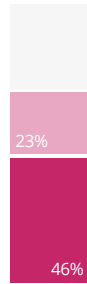

Global

Cambridge English Cambridge English

Delivering presentations

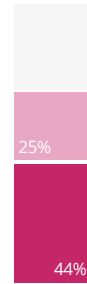

Global

Cambridge English Cambridge English

Participating in meetings

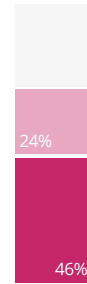

Global

Cambridge English Cambridge English

Reading reports

Global

Cambridge English Cambridge English

Advanced to native level
 Basic to intermediate level

What does this mean?

Sectors such as Banking, Finance and Law have the highest English requirements compared to Travel, Leisure and Hospitality, where employers have lower language requirements. Companies in non-native English-speaking countries have the highest English language requirements – more than 49% require advanced levels of English.

Learn about these findings in our executive summary and register to download our full report, with detailed insights of what this means from our Cambridge English experts. We are experts in the English language testing requirements of businesses worldwide.